1. Description

The CEDR program provides funding for clean-energy initiatives to eligible remote communities that are off-grid residential regions that rely on diesel fuel for electricity generation. Remote communities can apply to three funding streams to support them as they progress through various stages of their planning and implementation of their decarbonization projects. This will help to ensure remote communities have financial supports throughout the life cycle of their energy projects, whether it be at the beginning, early, mid or late stages of planning, or implementation of their decarbonization projects. Stream 1: Community Energy Planning (CEP) Stream 2: Demand Side Management (DSM) Stream 3: Renewable Energy Generation (REG)

2. Eligibility Requirements

Eligible Community

Only remote communities with diesel generating stations are eligible for funding.
